CAMPTON, March 1, 1885.

ANNUAL REPORT OF THE
SUPERINTENDING SCHOOL COMMITTEE
FOR THE
YEAR ENDING MARCH 1, 1885.

REPORT OF SUPERINTENDING SCHOOL COMMITTEE.

Fellow-Citizens :

The results of the school year just closed have, generally speaking, verified the promise of its beginning. The selection of teachers has been judicious, and, with one or two exceptions, fortunate. Much might be said to the individual credit of the majority of the teaching force ; but, as a number of them are already well known in the community, and as the success or failure of others has largely depended upon unconsidered advantages or hindrances, and as that success or failure is already apparent to those most concerned, the benefit of personal mention here would be doubtful. The teachers have been females, with one exception,—a gentleman whose perfect success demonstrated the aptitude of his sex and the wisdom of his method in the control of a school where ages and dispositions were as various as the scholars were numerous, and a firm, trained hand was needed at the helm. We have been blessed with teachers of large experience and all desirable mental acquirements, and the management of many has been gentle, firm and versatile ; but, in one or two instances, scholars have suffered under the misrule of teachers at once arbitrary, irritable, and sadly deficient in the highest attainment of an instructor of children, a knowledge of and sympathy with the child nature. Childhood is a study which should have a place in the curriculum of every training school. Where it is not the fault of ignorance it is cruel to chain a little child down in a dreary, sunless wilderness of intellectual mysteries for four or five hours a day, under the stern eye and inflexible "method" of a teacher as unfit to teach and mold the mind of childhood as a French pastry-cook is to cater for a county house. As the possibilities of the man are wrapped in the child, possibilities only attainable through the avenues of learning; as the highest need of the land is expressed in the qualities of heart and mind it elects to honor in the men and women of its choice, it is the solemn duty of the citizen to secure the highest educational privileges for his child;—the untidy and reluctant scrawl on the page of your boys' copy book may one day, like Lincoln's and Garfield's and Webster's and Wilson's and the long list of other district school boy names, be set down in characters of light by the indelible pencil of history.

Supervision has been necessarily inadequate owing to the number and remoteness of the districts, and here let me say, a share of this burden might be shouldered by parents who could and should know more of the internal work of the schools; in those districts where visiting is the pleasant and helpful habit, as a rule, the fewest complaints are heard: parents thus learn to appreciate the fact that children carry the home influence into the schoolroom, also their amiable or refractory dispositions; that teachers have many unappreciated trials: that it is unwise to adversely criticise the teacher in the presence of the pupils. Fault-finding, like other evil habits grows upon us unconsciously. I heard a dear old lady, now passed on into a clearer and more enduring light than ours, solemnly condemn one of our best and most popular teachers in these words: "She's too stuck up, we don't want her." We respect even the opinion of the infidel if he has faithfully investigated the plan of salvation, but patience fails when we hear a parent condemn a teacher of whose methods he knows little or nothing, whose schoolroom he has never visited, whose face perhaps he has never seen.

School visiting also convinces the parent that, however high the qualifications of the teacher, however perfect the sympathy between teacher and scholar may be, these happy conditions will hardly overcome the effects of bad air, damp, dilapidated, neglected, isolated school buildings, deficient heating apparatus and lack of the ordinary requirements of the schoolroom, such as a map, a globe, books for the teacher's desk, etc.

Some districts possess important advantages over others so that no general standard of scholarship is possible, hence the energizing influence of competition is wanting. A competitive exhibition which could easily be made practicable, would be an appropriate close to the school year; its advantages are too obvious to be enumerated here.

I would earnestly suggest that each school day be opened by prayer and the reading of the bible. Vocal culture should be encouraged not only as a needful recreation but for its refining and humanizing influence.

A little reflection will reveal the fact that the hindrances and unequal advantages here dealt with do not comprise all of the objections to the district system. In the rural districts of our state, where the soil is rocky, the summer is brief and hired labor is dear, necessity, man's best tutor, equips our boys with the very best weapons with which to face the world, the true elements of an industrial education; and the saying is common among the merchants and artizans of the great cities, "Our country boys are always brightest." They go forth into the world with bright perception and sharp wits, and the great success of many of them has glorified the old school system, but the halo which has thus gathered about it is a mere will-o'-the-wisp if the highest principle which it seeks to foster is not the life of the all domineering and eternal spirit of progress which would now erect above its grave a slab inscribed "Rest in peace."

The following list of text-books prescribed by my predecessor, approved by me, my approval being endorsed by the State Supt. of Education:

Arithmetic, Greenleaf's (Practical).
